

The Theodora Oringer Sports and Entertainment Practice Group is renowned for representing the nation's most prominent names in the sports and entertainment sector. We have represented professional sports teams, players, owners, sports venues, concert venues, video game companies, studios, producers, directors, and entertainers in a variety of matters including cases or projects of historic and national significance.

Theodora Oringer has one of the nation's premier entertainment and sports litigation practices. We have been featured in prominent publications and on television for our successful handling of matters of national significance. We are equally proud of our distinguished reputation among the judiciary and our peers in the legal community, for our innovative, cutting edge approach to negotiating, litigating and trying cases in this dynamic and exciting sector.

Our business and transactions lawyers have conducted negotiations and provided business advice in virtually all areas, including executive employment contracts, player contracts, studio contracts, merchandise contracts, advertising contracts, trademarks, copyrights, and intellectual property, as well as tax issues for film and music artists and professional athletes in baseball, basketball, hockey and football.
